

Jenny's love of bright colours and an interest in painting with acrylic led her to join an abstract painting class in Nedlands and with the birth of her first grandchild she discovered the joy of painting children.

She particularly loves painting them playing at the beach. Jenny has been very successful with this subject and as well as selling her paintings at exhibitions, she has started accepting commissions to paint the children and grandchildren of people who have seen her work.

Jenny plans to continue painting children as she finds them so enjoyable but she does still paint abstracts and sunsets in acrylic from time to time.

Testimonial

"Thank you so much for the painting - we are genuinely thrilled with it and love how you have so cleverly captured the likeness to our girls.

It will be a Christmas present for our son and daughter in law, assuming we can bear to part with it! All the best and see you at the next exhibition". Jacquie and John Graindorge
